FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE (Newswire.net-January 9, 2013) Tampa Bay- Cleaning pools keeps getting more and more interesting as technology leads the way to take the elbow out of “elbow grease”. Robots and mechanical assistance in doing heavy work and tedious tasks certainly can be alluring for some commercial pool service companies. However, some might argue that there is no substitute for doing some of the cleaning tasks the “old fashioned” way.

Cooper Pools in Tampa, has seen many innovations in the pool cleaning business in order to make things easier for service providers that can utilize machinery instead of escalating their payrolls. Without a doubt, the work is hard and requires some serious physical effort, especially in the heat of the Florida sun. There is something to be said for the traditional manpower approach to scrubbing and vacuuming that gets out the grime and keeps the pools looking pristine.

There are also many other facets of servicing a pool including backwashing the filters and handling the motors and machinery that require chemicals and filtration management. Although much of the mixtures are quantitative and can be measured with computers, there is still a level of human calculation and oversight that cannot be overlooked.

With swimming pools proliferating in Tampa and the building economy picking up again, there seems to be a rising demand for the servicing of these new and existing swimming pools. A house looks very decorative with a nicely landscaped patio and swimming pool, however unless it is properly maintained with the right chemical balance of chemicals at all times, a nice looking pool can quickly turn to an algae pond with bacteria abound. Cooper Tampa Bay Pool Service sees this market as growing at leaps and bounds. Their forte has always seemed to be on customer service and head off the problems before they grow into larger and deeper ones.

Having originally started in New Jersey, the adjustment from Northeastern weather to Florida made perfect sense for the Cooper Pool group. Certainly a much higher proportion of the community has pools in Tampa, but as important is the longer warm weather season that requires a longer maintenance season as well.
